NORTHERN VIETNAM

Northern Vietnam is full of culture and natural wonders. Its three most popular destinations, Hanoi, Ha Long Bay and Sa Pa, are also among the most visited in Vietnam. The origin of Vietnamese culture and history is mostly from this region, especially the area around Hanoi. Its shoreline contains many beautiful islands, some of which are untouched. Many backpackers also favor the impressive landscape in the northern mountains in Ha Giang and Sa Pa. With Hanoi consistently ranking among the world's top 10 destinations by TripAdvisor, the region gets more touristy every day; one can now find European tourists as far as Ha Giang, one of the most remote provinces.

THE CENTRAL COAST

The Central Coast of Viet Nam is likened by the Vietnamese to the bamboo pole connecting the baskets of North and South. The Truong Son Mountains, which stretch all the way to the coast between Hue and Danang, have traditionally divided the country in two in terms of weather and dialect, although the actual demarcation line during the Vietnam War was slightly higher up at the 17th parallel to the north of Hue.

THE CENTRAL HIGHLANDS

The Central Highlands of Vietnam are a distinct contrast from the tropical south, with an arid climate, rolling hills, and blue skies. The region sees few foreign visitors, and many of them go to revisit old battlefields or see the indigenous tribes. Besides the pleasant city of Da Lat, it is the scenery and the ethnic minorities living here that draw travelers to this region. Although most people around here, different to their counterparts in the north-west highlands, only don their traditional clothing for special occasions, the shape and structure of the housings is much more diversified and striking. From long houses to bamboo huts, stilt houses and large communal houses, every region and ethnic has its own distinct style. Everyday life is the same simple agricultural routine, and you are likely to get invited for a mug of rice wine rather often.

SOUTHERN VIETNAM

Southern Vietnam covers the Mekong Delta, the extreme southern end of the Mekong River, and the area around Ho Chi Minh city, Viet Nam.

As all deltas, it receives the bounty of the siltation from the upper Mekong, and as such is a very rich and lush area, covered with rice fields. It produces about half of the total of Vietnam's agricultural output (in fact the delta produces more rice than Korea and Japan altogether), and is the place for timeless sceneries of farmers planting or harvesting rice.

The Mekong splits in Cambodia into two main rivers, the Bassac (Hau Giang) and the First river (Tien Giang), then in Vietnam into a more complex system, creating a maze of small canals, rivers and arroyos interspersed with villages and floating markets. Life in the Mekong Delta revolves much around the river, and all the villages are often accessible by river as well as by road.

The high times of life in the Mekong delta are the lunar new year (Tet), and the mid-autumn festival (Tet trung thu), where children will set hundreds of candles on their way on the river on as many tiny skiffs. If you know how to take your time, or are guided by an able guide, you will certainly enjoy your stay in the Mekong delta.

1 Geography

Viet Nam is one of the most beautiful countries in Asia. It shares borders with China, Laos and Cambodia, and faces the East Sea (South China Sea). Thanks to its location, Viet Nam is the bridge linking Southeast Asian mainland together. It is an S-shaped country, with thousands of offshore islands, the largest archipelagoes of the Hoang Sa (Paracel) islands and the Truong Sa (Spratly) Islands. The country's land area is about 331,051.4 sq.km and lies between East longitudes 102°08' and 109°28', and North latitudes 8°02' and 23°23'. Viet Nam offers a 3,260km coastline and its inland borderline is 4,550km. From North to South, the country stretches on about 1,650km.

3 Topography

Three quarters of the territory consist of mountainous regions. Viet Nam has two major deltas, the Red River Delta and the Mekong Delta, as well as four distinctive mountainous zones (North East, North West, Northern Truong Son, Southern Truong Son), South-Central Coast, each possessing its own unique features.

2 Climate

Viet Nam is located in a tropical and temperate zone. The climate is characterized by a strong monsoon influence, a considerable amount of sunny days, and a high rate of rainfall and humidity. The tropical and the mountainous regions enjoy a temperate climate. The climate in the South of Viet Nam is divided into two distinguished seasons (from May to November). The four distinct seasons are most evident in the Northern provinces. The annual average temperature in some cities is 24.6°C in Ha Noi, 25.3°C in Hue, about 28°C in Ho Chi Minh City

4 People

The Vietnamese population exceeds 90,728,900 (in the year 2014) and is divided into 54 ethnic groups. The largest group, the Viet (King), accounts for 80% of the whole population and is concentrated in lowland areas, whereas most of ethnic minorities live in the high-lands and the mountainous areas.

5 Religion

There is no official religion in Viet Nam, but Buddhism is very popular. Buddhist pagodas and Catholic churches generally constitute interesting tourist attractions. Some religions are more specific to the southern regions, such as the Cao Dai sect, the Hoa Hao sect, and Islam. Most Vietnamese worship their ancestors.

6 Culture

The Vietnamese culture, endowed with a long and rich heritage, is deeply stamped with national pride. Famous ancient cultures include the Nui Do culture, followed by the Son Vi culture founded over 10,000 years ago, then by the Hoa Binh - Bac Son culture.

The Dong Son culture received the most brilliant development and was deeply connected with the Red River civilization, the wet rice and the emergence of the primeval states (Van Lang - Au Lac in the North; in the Central region, the Sa Huynh culture, which belongs to the Cham people; and in the South, the Oc Eo culture of Phu Nam State).

Despite of historical contingencies, there are still over 40,000 preserved historic and cultural sites over Viet Nam in 2014, thousands of which have been listed as national sites. These relics are concentrated mainly in Ha Noi, Hue, and some other areas such as the relics of the Kings Hung in Phong Chau (Phu Tho Province) date back to the period of the formation of the country. There are also the ancient capital of Hoa Lu (Ninh Binh Province), My Son Sanctuary (Quang Nam Province) ...

Specific features of Viet Nam are likewise reflected in other cultural tokens such as legends, festivals, costumes and traditional art forms such as Xoan singing, Ca Tru singing, quan ho Bac Ninh folk songs, Vi and Giam folk songs, Don Ca Tai Tu music and songs, classical theatre (Tuong), Cai Luong, popular theatre (Cheo), water puppetry...

7 History

Viet Nam is a nation with thousand years of glorious history that can be divided into four main periods:

1. Prehistoric Era (from 2879 to 208 B.C): Kings Hung founded a country; Au Lac Nation was established.
2. Chinese domination period and the struggle for national independence (208 B.C - 938 A.D): This period was one of the fiercest periods of hardship in Viet Nam's history.
3. National construction and defense for independence (938 - 1945): This period was a brilliant era for national revival and development of the country and was marked by the glorious victory of the Vietnamese people against the aggressors.
4. National independence and socialism (1945 up to now): For nearly 100 years under French oppression, the Vietnamese people had constantly fought for independence. The revolution succeeded in August 1945 under the leadership of Ho Chi Minh and the Vietnamese Communist Party proclaimed its independence on September 2, a date which became the National Day.

During the following 30 years, the Vietnamese people continued to resist and protect their independence, Viet Nam has been unified ever since the great victory in spring 1975. Since 1976, the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam was proclaimed, with Ha Noi as its capital. Viet Nam enters a new stage of peace and development as a country.

Halong Bay is a beautiful natural wonder in northern Vietnam near the Chinese border. The Bay is dotted with 1,600 limestone islands and islets and covers an area of over 1,500 sqkm. This extraordinary area was declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1994.

The best way to get to Halong City is by car, minibus or bus from Hanoi which is only 170km away. If budget is not a problem, an hour-long helicopter transfer is also available.

Sprawling Halong City (also known as Bai Chay) is the bay's main gateway, but its high-rises are a disappointing doorstep to this site. Most visitors opt for cruise tours that include sleeping on board within the bay, while a growing number are deciding to eschew the main bay completely, heading straight for Cat Ba Island from where trips to less-visited but equally alluring Lan Ha Bay are easily set up.

TUNNELS

The Vietcong, alongside the North, dug tens of thousands of miles of tunnels underneath Vietnam. The digging began in the 1940s, and the Vietcong joined the efforts in the early 1960s. A key city in what was formally South Vietnam, Saigon (now Ho Chi Minh City) was the site of hundreds of these tunnels. These tunnels are now known as the Cu Chi Tunnels.

As the United States increasingly escalated its military presence in Vietnam in support of a non-Communist regime in South Vietnam beginning in the early 1960s, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops (as Communist supporters in South Vietnam were known) gradually expanded the tunnels.

Communist forces began digging a network of tunnels under the jungle terrain of South Vietnam in the late 1940s, during their war of independence from French colonial authority. Tunnels were often dug by hand, only a short distance at a time.

CRAZY HOUSE

One thing's for sure: This "crazy" complex is one of a kind. Standing in stark contrast to Dalat's French colonial villas, the bizarre avant garde guesthouse is a maze of spiral staircases, sculptural bedrooms, undulating surfaces, swirls of bright colors, narrow bridges and hidden nooks.

In addition to staying in one of Crazy House's guest rooms, visitors can also tour the Dalat attraction for a fee. Though there's no restaurant, visitors can purchase drinks and snacks at a stall in the garden.

At first glance, the surreal structures recall mind-bending scenes from a Salvador Dali painting or perhaps even the organic works of modernist Catalan architect Antoni Gaudi. The playful style continues within the tree houses, where 10 guest rooms -- each named after an animal or type of plant -- are full of organic shapes, cavern-like beds, and wooden seating areas.

HIGHLIGHT OF THE TOUR

Only in Mui Ne WHITE SAND DUNE

White Sand Dunes is the most outstanding sandy hills in Binh Thuan in particular and Vietnam in general. Tiptoeing along White Sand Dunes in Mui Ne is one of should-not-miss things to do in Mui Ne, apart from enjoying great time in cool seawater.

White Sand Dunes is stretching in the area of Mui Ne sandy hills. The name of White Sand Dunes originates from its sand's color. The white sand hills are also named Bau Trang (White Lake). The Bau Trang has three lakes: Bau Ong (Gentleman Lake), Bau Ba (Lady Lake), and Bau Xoai (Mango Lake).

White Sand Dunes are the second-to-none place in Vietnam. These sand dunes are formed by ancient iron mines existing for hundreds of years. Iridescent sand spreads like wild deserts with different shapes owing to wind blowing. In addition, the intrusion of sand creates many interesting scenes in these sand dunes. It seems to be endless when strolling on the sand dunes.

IMPRESSIVE BEAUTY

A land of staggering natural beauty and cultural complexities, of dynamic megacities and hill-tribe villages, Vietnam is both exotic and compelling. There's a lot to love about travelling in Vietnam, which stretches from the soaring mountains and fascinating ethnic groups of the north to the endless rice paddies and vibrant waterways of the Mekong Delta in the south, with more than 3000km of glorious coastline in between.

Throw in a good transport infrastructure of buses, trains and flights and an abundance of cheap but excellent street food and it's no surprise Vietnam graces countless bucket lists. But, like any country, it has its challenges, and some visitors come home with tales of scams, hectic roads and pushy vendors.
